Funded by a generous grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the series is a collaborative venture of the University of Illinois Press, the University Press of Mississippi, and the University of Wisconsin Press, in conjunction with the American Folklore Society.

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

Six authors working on their first books are chosen each year for a workshop at AFS and as candidates for publication in the book series. Projects must be single-authored, nonfiction books based on folklore research. For details and submission guidelines visit www.folklorestudies.org. Proposals are due April 1, 2015.
