The American Society for Legal History is a non-profit membership organization dedicated to fostering scholarship, teaching, and dissemination of information about the law and institutions of all legal systems. Founded in 1956, the Society sponsors Law and History Review and Studies in Legal History, a series of book-length monographs available to ASLH members at substantial pre-publication discounts. In addition, the Society holds an annual meeting to promote scholarship and interaction among teachers, practitioners, and students interested in legal history and publishes a semiannual newsletter reporting developments in the field.

What the experts say . . .

“Since its first appearance in 1983, the Law and History Review has been one of the most important forums for international debate about questions of legal history. The journal is above all an intellectual delight. Successive editors have crafted a particular blend of acute analysis, innovative research and lively critical exchange. From a European perspective, the journal seems exemplary. It retains the loyalty of the most learned scholars while remaining far less conventional in the openness of its debates and the breadth of its themes than most European journals. The Frankfurt School of legal history will continue to follow the Law and History Review attentively, and learn from it.”

-- Michael Stolleis, Director of the Max Planck Institute for European Legal History, Frankfurt, Germany

“The Law and History Review is for everyone interested in the interface between law, history and society. No other journal so consistently attracts scholarship of the highest quality. International in scope, refreshingly open to cutting-edge debates about theory, method and historiography, the Law and History Review greatly enriches the literature. A superb journal.”

-- David Sugarman, Professor of Law and Director of the Program in European Legal Studies, Lancaster University, UK

“The Law and History Review consistently widens my horizons. Its wise editorial judgments, its original forums and scholarly exchanges, and its insistence on fresh argument, clear prose, and new perspectives sustain an international scholarly community.”

-- Linda K. Kerber, May Brodbeck Professor in the Liberal Arts and Professor of History, University of Iowa

“The Law and History Review brings to its readers the historical, interdisciplinary and comparative perspectives so essential to our attempts to understand society in the 21st century.”

-- Pnina Lahav, Professor of Law, Boston University School of Law

“The Law and History Review is an interdisciplinary journal of exceptional merit. It has become indispensable for lawyers interested in history, historians interested in law, and socio-legal scholars in general.”

-- Martin Chanock, Professor of Law, La Trobe University, Australia

-- Lawrence Friedman, Marion Rice Kirkwood Professor of Law, Stanford University

JSTOR’s sophisticated search and retrieval software and its comprehensive coverage have made it one of the most exciting developments in information technologies of recent years. Institutions that subscribe to JSTOR will have an opportunity to acquire access to the entire run of the journal online, the single most comprehensive, fully searchable archive of legal history scholarship available anywhere!

Law and History Review On-line!

Electronic Full Text Edition Is Available to All Subscribers at www.historycooperative.org

The Law and History Review is an active participant in the History Cooperative, a pioneering nonprofit humanities resource offering state-of-the-art search capabilities. Its fundamental goal is to offer the finest on-line history scholarship. The History Cooperative currently contains full text of seven highly regarded history journals with more being added every year.

The History Cooperative employs “open source” software, thereby ensuring that other organizations can understand the search engine. The Search Builder feature allows users to select individual terms or sets of words to initiate and then broaden a search, not only across the growing body of History Cooperative content, but also to other sites.
