

Contents

Foreword— Roger N. Buckley	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
“Fred Ho’s Demon Baritone Saxophone and His Green Monster Band Blowing the Demons Down”— Richard Hamasaki	xiii
Introduction— Tamara Roberts	1
PART I. REVOLUTION IN MUSIC
“It Remains to Be Seen”— Esther Iverem	32
Chapter 1. Enter the Voice of the Dragon: Fred Ho, Bruce Lee, and the Popular Avant-Garde— Kevin Fellezs	35
Chapter 2. “Oh the Hilt, the Hilt Again Please”: A Glimpse Inside the Making of Operas with Fred Ho— Ruth Margraff	54
Chapter 3. Fred Ho’s Operatic Journey — Arthur J. Sabatini	63
PART II. THE AESTHETICS OF POLITICS
“Politics and Poetry”— Genny Lim	96
Chapter 4. “Return to the Source”: Fred Ho’s Music and Politics in the Asian American Movement and Beyond— Diane C. Fujino	97

Chapter 5. Red Dragon, Blue Warrior: Fred Ho's Ethical Aesthetic— Salim Washington	120
Chapter 6. In Fred Ho's Body of Work — Bill V. Mullen	147

PART III. A LIFE IN COMMUNITY

“This Evening (For Fred Ho)”— Jayne Cortez	162
Chapter 7. Machete and Chopsticks — Magdalena Gómez	163
Chapter 8. Somewhere between Ideology, Practice, and the Cellular War . . . the Dolphins Sing: An Improv on the Fake Book of a Revolutionary Artist — Peggy Myo-Young Choy	178
Chapter 9. “That’s Why the Work Is What It Is”: An Interview with Fred Ho — Miyoshi Smith	191
Chapter 10. Go On, Shoot— Kalamu ya Salaam	214
Excerpts from “Re-English, for Fred Ho” — Robert Kocik	225
Afterword— Arthur Song	227
Appendixes
Discography	233
Production History	238
Curriculum Vitae	242
Contributors	255
Index	263