

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments vii
Introduction 1

Part One: Roots 9

1. Got On My Traveling Shoes: Black Sacred Music and the Great Migration 11
2. “When the Fire Fell”: The Sanctified Church Contribution to Chicago Gospel Music 27
3. Sacred Music in Transition: Charles Henry Pace and the Pace Jubilee Singers 48
4. Turn Your Radio On: Chicago Sacred Radio Broadcast Pioneers 58
5. “Someday, Somewhere”: The Formation of the Gospel Nexus 71
6. Sweeping through the City: Thomas A. Dorsey and the Gospel Nexus (1932–1933) 87
7. Across This Land and Country: New Songs for a New Era (1933–1939) 112
8. From Birmingham to Chicago: The Great Migration of the Gospel Quartet 132

Part Two: Branches 147

9. Sing a Gospel Song: The 1940s, Part One 149
10. “If It’s in Music—We Have It”: The Fertile Crescent of Gospel Music Publishing 167
11. “Move On Up a Little Higher”: The 1940s, Part Two 179
12. Postwar Gospel Quartets: “Rock Stars of Religious Music” 204
13. The Gospel Caravan: Midcentury Melodies 229
14. “He Could Just Put a Song on His Fingers”: Second-Generation Gospel Choirs 260
15. “God’s Got a Television”: Gospel Music Comes to the Living Room 281
16. “Tell It Like It Is”: Songs of Social Significance 297
17. One of These Mornings: Chicago Gospel at the Crossroads 317

Appendix A. 1920s African American Sacred Music Recordings Made in Chicago 331

Appendix B. African American Sacred Music Recordings Made in Chicago, 1930–1941 335

Notes 337
Bibliography 389
General Index 401
Index of Songs 435

Illustrations follow page 228