

Contents

INTRODUCTION
Oxford: The Home of Controversy about Animals	1
Andrew Linzey and Clair Linzey

PART 1 NORMALIZING THE UNTHINKABLE

THE ETHICS OF USING ANIMALS IN RESEARCH

A Report of the Working Group of the Oxford Centre for Animal Ethics

Introduction to the Report	13
1.1 The Scale of the Problem	14
1.2 The Old Debate	22
1.3 The New Scientific Critiques	27
1.4 The Changing Ethical Paradigm	34
1.5 The Putative Justifications	44
1.6 The Problem of Institutionalization	55
1.7 The Failure of Control	63
1.8 Undercover Investigations	75
1.9 Consideration of Counterarguments	85
1.10 Summary and Conclusions	89
Bibliography	93

PART 2 THE SUPPORTING ESSAYS

2.1	Animal Experimentation in Classical Antiquity	103
	Simon Pulleyn
2.2	Gender and the Animal Experiments Controversy in Nineteenth-Century America	112
	Robyn Hederman
2.3	Is “Necessity” a Useful Concept in Animal Research Ethics?	120
	John Rossi and Samuel A. Garner
2.4	Science Fiction and Science Fact: Ethics and Nonhuman Animal Experiments.	137
	Kay Peggs
2.5	Harms versus Benefits: A Practical Critique of Utilitarian Calculations	148
	Katy D. Taylor
2.6	Utilitarian Benefit and Uncertainty under Emergent Systems	160
	Robert Patrick Stone Lazo
2.7	Do Moral Principles Permit Experimenting on Nonconsenting Beings?	168
	Nedim C. Buyukmihci
2.8	Can Animal Experiments Be Ethically Acceptable When They Are Not Scientifically Defensible?	175
	Jarrod Bailey
2.9	A Rawlsian Case against Animal Experimentation	185
	Carlos Frederico Ramos de Jesus
2.10	The Harms of Captivity within Laboratories and Afterward	192
	Elizabeth Tyson
2.11	When Harry Meets Harry: An Ethical Assessment of Harry Harlow’s Maternal Deprivation Experiments	200
	Kurt Remele
	About the Editors, Contributors, and Members of the Working Group.	207
	Index.	213