

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
1 Raising the Bar: Alice Coachman and the Boundaries of Postwar American Identity, 1946–1948	12
2 Sprints of Citizenship: Identity Politics and Black Women’s Athleticism, 1951–1952	46
3 Passing the Baton toward Belonging: Mae Faggs and the Making of the Americanness of Black American Track Women, 1954–1956	81
4 Winning as American Women: The Heteronormativity of Black Women Athletic Heroines, 1958–1960	115
5 “Olympian Quintessence”: Wilma Rudolph, Athletic Femininity, and American Iconicity, 1960–1962	139
Conclusion. The Precarity of the Baton Pass: Race, Gender, and the Enduring Barriers to American Belonging	165
Notes	175
Bibliography	209
Index	223