Pressing On
The Roni Stoneman Story
RONI STONEMAN
as told to Ellen Wright

The tragicomic life story of one of America's best-known country entertainers, told with warmth and honesty

“Pressing On is an Appalachian Angela’s Ashes told from a female perspective. It tells the story of Roni Stoneman’s private and public life with remarkable and appealing candor. It is a book full of unfolding revelations, told with a sense of humor, and without an ounce of self-pity. Her story is entertaining at times, heartbreaking at others, but always compelling.”
—Sandy L. Ballard, editor of Appalachian Journal

“This is a unique book: the authentic story, in her own voice, of a woman who was once one of America’s most widely known entertainers. There will never be another Roni Stoneman, and there will never be another book like this one.”
—Elinor Langer, author of Josephine Herbst

This book recounts the fascinating life of Roni Stoneman, the youngest daughter of the pioneering country music family, and a girl who, in spite of poverty and abusive husbands, eventually became “The First Lady of Banjo,” a fixture on the Nashville scene, and, as Hee Haw’s Ironing Board Lady, a comedienne beloved by millions of Americans nationwide.

Drawn from over seventy-five hours of recorded interviews, Pressing On reveals that Roni is also a master storyteller. In her own words and with characteristic spunk and candor, she describes her “pooristic” (“way beyond ‘poverty-stricken’”) Appalachian childhood, and how she learned from her brother Scott to play the challenging and innovative three-finger banjo picking style developed by Earl Scruggs. She also warmly recounts Hee Haw—era adventures with Minnie Pearl, Roy Clark, and Buck Owens; her encounters as a musician with country greats including Loretta Lynn, Johnny Cash, June Carter, and Patsy Cline; as well as her personal struggles with shiftless and violent husbands, her relationships with her children, and her musical life after Hee Haw.

ELLEN WRIGHT conducted the interviews with Roni and arranged and edited the transcriptions. In 2005, she was named the Charles Deering McCormick University Distinguished Lecturer at Northwestern University, where she teaches in the Writing Program.

Produced by Clark “Bucky” Halker

VOLUME 2: FIDDLERS
Produced by Paul Tyler and Clark “Bucky” Halker

A lively and enlightening slice of Illinois’s rich musical heritage

Although few are aware of it, the state of Illinois has some of the richest and most varied musical traditions in the country. As a major agricultural producer bordering the South and situated on the nation’s major waterways, Illinois became home to styles now called folk, country, country blues, bluegrass, gospel, and string band. At the same time, as an industrial center, Illinois attracted workers from all over the United States, Europe, and Mexico. These migrants brought their music with them, and the state also became home to Irish reels, Scandinavian waltzes, Serbo-Croatian kolos, Polish polkas, country western ballads, labor anthems, Mexican corridos, and ethnic comedy skits. The recordings chosen for these volumes are all performed by Illinois musicians, and include selections drawn from new studio recordings, archival collections, 78s, LPs, and CDs, as well as field and home recordings made by folklorists, amateur scholars, and family members.

Volume 1 offers a selection of Illinois’s best folk music. Its artists include Carl Sandburg and the Staples Singers, the 1930s WLS National Barn Dance artists, the Girls of the Golden West, and 1920s country-bluesman Henry Spaulding from Cairo. There are also tracks from well-known alt-country stars like Jon Langford from the Mekons, Janet Bean from Eleventh Dream Day, and Kelly Hogan. Added to that are songs from folk legend Art Thieme, Decatur’s Deacon James Biggs and the St. John Missionary Choir, labor songster Bucky Halker, and Tejano balladeers Silvano Ramos and Daniel Ramirez.

Volume 2 features a sampling of the prairie state’s best fiddle music. Featured artists include Grammy winner Alison Krauss and Union Station, Irish champion Liz Carroll, WLS stars, the Prairie Ramblers, Sones de Mexico Ensemble, and Chicago’s legendary jazz icon Johnny Frigo. There are also songs from Martin, Bogan, and Armstrong, Banjo Ikey Robinson, the Nordic Cowboys, Sar Planina, and the Polish Highlanders, among others. The CD’s coproducer Paul Tyler joins fiddlers Chirps Smith and the teenage Stephanie Coleman for “Ol’ Woodard’s Tune.”

PAUL TYLER is a folklorist and musician who teaches at National-Louis University and Chicago’s Old Town School of Folk Music. CLARK “BUCKY” HALKER is a songwriter, performer, and labor historian, as well as senior program officer of the Illinois Humanities Council.

Lincoln the Lawyer
BRIAN DIRCK

What the law did to and for Abraham Lincoln, and its important impact on his future presidency

“There is nothing in or out of print that comes close to the originality, breadth, and documentation of this welcome study of Lincoln’s legal career.”
—Cullom Davis, former director, Lincoln Legal Papers

Despite historians’ focus on the man as president and politician, Abraham Lincoln lived most of his adult life as a practicing lawyer. It was as a lawyer that he fed his family, made his reputation, bonded with Illinois, and began his political career. Lawyering was also how Lincoln learned to become an expert mediator between angry antagonists, as he applied his knowledge of the law and of human nature to settle one dispute after another. Frontier lawyers worked hard to establish respect for the law and encourage people to resolve their differences without intimidation or violence. These were the very skills Lincoln used so deftly to hold a crumbling nation together during his presidency.

The growth of Lincoln’s practice attests to the trust he was able to inspire, and his travels from court to court taught him much about the people and land of Illinois. Lincoln the Lawyer explores the origins of Lincoln’s desire to practice law, his legal education, his partnerships with John Stuart, Stephen Logan, and William Herndon, and the maturation of his far-flung practice in the 1840s and 1850s. Brian Dirck provides a context for law as it was practiced in mid-century Illinois and evaluates Lincoln’s merits as an attorney by comparison with his peers. He examines Lincoln’s clientele, his circuit practice, his views on legal ethics, and the supposition that he never defended a client he knew to be guilty. This approach allows readers not only to consider Lincoln as he lived his life—it also shows them how the law was used and developed in Lincoln’s lifetime, how Lincoln charged his clients, how he was paid, and how he addressed judge and jury.

BRIAN DIRCK is a professor of history at Anderson University in Anderson, Indiana. He is the author of Lincoln and Davis: Imagining America, 1809–1865.

Anti-Indianism in Modern America
A Voice from Tatekeya’s Earth
ELIZABETH COOK-LYNN

A powerful and controversial Native American voice addresses overlooked injustices both past and present

“With this set of incisive essays, Elizabeth Cook-Lynn confirms her status as the most insightful Indian essayist of our time. Displaying an incredible breadth of knowledge in a variety of fields, she examines some of the most controversial issues in American Indian studies.”
—Vine Deloria Jr., Pacific Historical Quarterly

In paperback for the first time, this volume tells the other side of stories of historical massacres and modern-day hate crimes against Native Americans —events that have been dismissed or glossed over by historians, journalists, and courts alike. Elizabeth Cook-Lynn exposes the colonialism that works both overtly and covertly to silence and diminish Native Americans, supported by a rhetoric of reconciliation, assimilation, and multiculturalism. By comparing anti-Indianism to anti-Semitism, she sets the American history of broken treaties, stolen lands, mass murder, cultural dispossession, and Indian hating in an international context of ethnic cleansing, “ecocide,” and colonial oppression.

ELIZABETH COOK-LYNN, a member of the Crow Creek Sioux Tribe, is a writer, poet, and professor emerita of Native American studies at Eastern Washington University. She lives in Rapid City, South Dakota. Her books include The Politics of Hallowed Ground (coauthored with Mario Gonzalez), and Aurelia, a Trilogy.

New Indians, Old Wars
ELIZABETH COOK-LYNN

Challenging received American history and forging a new path for Native American studies

“Elizabeth Cook-Lynn is one of the founding scholars of Native American studies, and with New Indians, Old Wars she remains one of its most important voices. To use her own language, she keeps our collective plot moving.”
—Jace Weaver, director, Institute of Native American Studies, University of Georgia

“In fiercely arguing for a tribal model of Indian studies based on sovereignty and indigenousness, Elizabeth Cook-Lynn brilliantly tells the story of the brutal U.S. colonization of Indian nations as well as its covering up of that history. This new work is as bold as the hard blue sky of Cook-Lynn’s homeland in the northern Plains. It is destined to become a classic of indigenous literature.”
—Roxanne Dunbar-Ortiz, author of Red Dirt: Growing Up Okie

Addressing Native American Studies’ past, present, and future, the essays in New Indians, Old Wars tackle the discipline head-on, presenting a radical revision of the popular view of the American West in the process. Instead of luxuriating in its past glories or accepting the widespread historians’ view of the West as a shared place, Elizabeth Cook-Lynn argues that it should be fundamentally understood as stolen.

Firmly grounded in the reality of a painful past, Cook-Lynn understands the story of the American West as teaching the political language of land theft and tyranny. She argues that to remedy this situation, Native American studies must be considered and pursued as its own discipline, rather than as a subset of history or anthropology. She makes an impassioned claim that such a shift, not merely an institutional or theoretical change, could allow Native American studies to play an important role in defending the sovereignty of indigenous nations today.

Manoel de Oliveira
RAN D A L  JO HNS ON

Understanding the iconoclastic work of a lifelong cinematic pioneer

With a career spanning over seventy years, Portuguese film director Manoel de Oliveira may be the oldest active filmmaker in the world today. Known for his distinctive formal techniques and philosophical treatment of themes such as frustrated love, nationhood, evil, and divine grace, the director’s work has run consistently against the mainstream. Focusing primarily on his feature films, Randal Johnson navigates Oliveira’s massive oeuvre, locating his work within the broader context of Portuguese and European cinema. He also examines multiple aspects of Oliveira’s conception of film language, ranging from early concerns with cinematic specificity to hybrid discourses suggesting a tenuous line between film and theater on the one hand, and between fiction and documentary on the other.

RAN D A L  JO HNS ON is professor of Luso-Brazilian literature and culture and director of the Latin American Center at the University of California, Los Angeles. He is the author of Cinema Novo x 5: Masters of Contemporary Brazilian Film and other books.

Roman Polanski
JAMES MORRISON

A new take on an eclectic and controversial director

James Morrison’s Roman Polanski offers one of the most comprehensive and critically engaged treatments ever written on Polanski’s work. Tracing the filmmaker’s remarkably diverse career from its beginnings to the present, the book provides commentary on all the major films in their historical, cultural, social, and artistic contexts. By locating Polanski’s work within the genres of comedy and melodrama, Morrison argues that the director is not merely obsessed with the theme of repression, but that his true interest is in the concrete—what is out in the open—and in why it is so rarely seen.

JAMES MORRISON is an associate professor of film and literature at Claremont McKenna College. He is the author of Passport to Hollywood: Hollywood Films, European Directors, and coauthor (with Thomas Schur) of The Films of Terrence Malick.

KATHLEEN McHUGH

The subversive style of the woman who has become one of the world’s greatest film directors

From Jane Campion’s early award-winning short films on through international sensation The Piano and beyond, Kathleen McHugh traces the director’s distinctive visual style as well as her commitment to consistently renovating the conventions of “women’s films.” By refusing to position her female protagonists as victims, McHugh argues, Campion scrupulously avoids the moral structures of melodrama, and though she often works with the narratives, mise-en-scène, and visual tropes typical of that genre, her films instead invite a distanced or even amused engagement.

KATHLEEN McHUGH is a professor of English and film, television, and digital media at the University of California, Los Angeles. She is the author of American Domesticity: From How-To Manual to Hollywood Melodrama.

JUAN A. SUÁREZ

The first major English-language study of Jarmusch

At a time when gimmicky, action-driven blockbusters ruled Hollywood, Jim Jarmusch spearheaded a boom in independent cinema by making low-budget films focused on intimacy, character, and new takes on classical narratives. His minimal form, peculiar pacing, wry humor, and blank affect have since been adopted by directors including Sophia Coppola, Hal Harley, Richard Linklater, and Wong Kar-Wai.

Juan A. Suárez’s Jim Jarmusch analyzes the director’s work from three mutually implicated perspectives: in relation to independent filmmaking from the 1980s to the present; as a form of cultural production that appropriates existing icons, genres, and motifs; and as an instance of postmodern politics.

JUAN A. SUÁREZ is an associate professor of American studies and English at the University of Murcia, Spain. He is the author of Pop Modernism: Noise and the Reinvention of the Everyday and other books.

STEVE GEHRKE

Selected by T. R. Hummer as a volume in the National Poetry Series

Providing poetic entry into the visual arts

“Steve Gehrke has delivered up a masterpiece of masterpieces, a book made up entirely of ekphrastic poems which is altogether unsettling, unfamiliar, uncanny, powerful. The secret of Gehrke’s method is the force of his gaze, which within the dramatic illusion of such poetry is a stand-in for the mind; in these poems artworks melt under the pressure of the writer’s consciousness of them, and products are re-rendered as pure process.”

—T. R. Hummer, author of The Infinity Sessions

In Michelangelo’s Seizure, Steve Gehrke seizes the lives of several classic and contemporary painters—from Caravaggio and Magritte to Francis Bacon and Jackson Pollock—to demonstrate how these artists transformed physical, psychological, and political suffering into art. Mirroring the brushstrokes in long, metaphor-laden sentences, Gehrke moves freely through the canvas, into and out of the artists’ lives, into the public realm, into history, to capture the way the creative mind can transform even the most violent surroundings—a prison cell, a battlefield, a madhouse—into a masterpiece.

with the witchcraft hushed inside his veins, on the flayed skin of St. Bartholomew, crumpled, fierce, with two dead bugs crushed into the paint, like that bit of terror, he would think, sealed inside of everything He makes.

—From the title poem Michelangelo’s Seizure

O Street
CORRINA WYCOFF

Powerful stories of a woman caught in the long shadow cast by the love of her mother

“In O Street, Corrina Wycoff paints a harrowing portrait of familial pain, mental illness, and the sometimes cruel tenacity of love. Hers is a world undone, through which mothers and daughters falter and fall, yet Wycoff never lets us forget the redemptive power these women hold for each other.” —Aimee Liu, author of Cloud Mountain and Flash House

“A deeply moving, deftly told, and keenly insightful tale of a daughter’s love, by turns helpless and heroic, for a mother who has forgotten how to love.” —Alex Shakar, author of The Savage Girl

The tightly linked stories of Corrina Wycoff’s gripping debut collection follow the life of Elizabeth Dinard. Raised in poverty by a schizophrenic single mother who self-medicates with heroin, Elizabeth experiences a childhood fraught with emotional and financial insecurity, as well as darker exploitations.

Now living a fragmented and desperate adulthood, she continually attempts to outrun her brutal past but proves unable to let go of her love for the charismatic, lawless mother who continues to haunt her. In her struggles as she ages, leaves home, moves through lovers, loses her mother to suicide, and eventually becomes a single mother herself, Elizabeth’s gritty determination to simply survive—to exist—is an enormous, if bittersweet, victory.

CORRINA WYCOFF’s fiction and essays have appeared in Other Voices, New Letters, Coal City Review, The Oregon Quarterly, Brainchild, Out of Line, Golden Handcuffs, and the anthologies Best Essays Northwest and The Clear Cut Future. She holds an MFA in creative writing from the University of Oregon, and an MA in English from the University of Illinois, Chicago. She lives with her son in Seattle, Washington, and teaches English and writing at Pierce College.

African American Foodways
History and Culture
EDITED BY ANNE L. BOWER

Moving beyond catfish and collard greens to the soul of African American cooking

Ranging over the progression from seventeenth-century West African fare to contemporary fusion dishes using “soul food” ingredients, this book provides an introduction to many aspects of African American foodways. Examining the combination of African, Caribbean, and South American traditions, the volume’s contributors offer insights from history, literary studies, sociology, anthropology, and African American studies to demonstrate how food’s material and symbolic values have contributed to African Americans’ identity for centuries. Individual chapters examine how African foodways survived the passage into slavery, cultural meanings associated with African American foodways, and the contents of African American cookbooks, both early and recent.

ANNE L. BOWER recently retired from the English Department of the Ohio State University. She is the author of Recipes for Reading: Community Cookbooks, Stories, Histories and other books.

BRIAN WANSINK

The ins and outs of marketing food

“This book is a must for everyone wanting to help people be healthier. It should be required reading for all dietetics students and practicing nutrition specialists.”
—Today’s Dietitian

Although encouraging people to eat more nutritionally can promote better health, most efforts by companies, health professionals, and even parents are disappointingly ineffective. Brian Wansink’s Marketing Nutrition focuses on why people eat the foods they do, and what can be done to improve their nutrition. Wansink argues that the true challenge in marketing nutrition lies in leveraging new tools of consumer psychology (which he specifically demonstrates) and by applying lessons from other products’ failures and successes. The key problem with marketing nutrition remains, after all, marketing.

BRIAN WANSINK is a professor of applied economics of marketing and of nutritional science at Cornell University. He is the director of the Cornell Food and Brand Lab and the author of Mindless Eating: Why We Eat More than We Think.

The Herbalist in the Kitchen
GARY ALLEN

The foodie’s ultimate herbal encyclopedia

“Finally, a reference book that won’t send you to another reference book to find what you’re looking for. The Herbalist in the Kitchen is a one-stop source for herb information. It includes everything from ethnic and scientific names to growing habits and culinary usage—all in a voice that makes you actually want to read it.”
—David Leite, publisher of the James Beard Award–winning Web site Leite’s Culinaria (www.leitesculinaria.com)

“Gary Allen’s delightful book The Herbalist in the Kitchen amuses as it deftly illuminates and educates the reader. Scholars and food professionals as well as home cooks and gardening aficionados will enjoy this splendid volume.”
—Francine Segan, food historian and author of The Philosopher’s Kitchen

Created as the ideal reference for anyone with a serious interest in cooking with herbs, spices, or related plant materials, The Herbalist in the Kitchen is truly encyclopedic in scope. It provides complete information about the uses, botany, toxicity, and flavor chemistry of herbs, as well as a listing for nearly every name that an ingredient is known by around the world.

Even including herbs and spices not yet seen in the United States (but likely to be featured in recipes for adventurous cooks soon), The Herbalist in the Kitchen is organized into one hundred and four sections, each consisting of a single botanical family. The book provides all available information about the chemical compounds responsible for a plant’s characteristic taste and scent, which allows cooks to consider new subtleties and potential alternatives. For instance, the primary flavoring ingredient of cloves is eugenol; when a cook knows that bay leaves also contain eugenol, a range of exciting substitutions becomes clear. The Herbalist in the Kitchen also provides guidance about measuring herbs, enabling readers to understand the dated measuring standards from antique cookbooks.

Alchemy of Bones
Chicago’s Luetgert Murder Case of 1897
ROBERT LOERZEL

The sensational story behind one of the first criminal investigations to use forensic analysis

“The Luetgert murder trial of 1897 had it all: sex and sausage-making, chemical vats and cadavers, a charismatic defendant and a famously missing corpse. For a brief time, it transfixed the entire world—then slowly faded from history. Now, in a painstakingly researched and stylishly written book, Robert Loerzel suspensefully revives this fascinating but long-forgotten episode in all its macabre glory.”
—Miles Harvey, author of The Island of Lost Maps: A True Story of Cartographic Crime

“Thanks to Robert Loerzel, this fascinating case comes back to life.”
—Journal of Forensic Science

On May 1, 1897, Louise Luetgert disappeared. Although no body was found, Chicago police arrested her husband, Adolph, the owner of a large sausage factory, and charged him with murder. The eyes of the world were still on Chicago following the success of the World’s Columbian Exposition, and the Luetgert case, with its missing victim, once-prosperous suspect, and all manner of gruesome theories regarding the disposal of the corpse, turned into one of the first media-fueled celebrity trials in American history.

Newspapers fought one another for scoops, people across the country claimed to have seen the missing woman alive, and each new clue led to fresh rounds of speculation about the crime. Meanwhile, sausage sales plummeted nationwide as rumors circulated that Luetgert had destroyed his wife’s body in one of his factory’s meat grinders.

Weaving in strange-but-true subplots involving hypnotists, palm-readers, English con artists, bullied witnesses, and insane-asylum bodysnatchers, Alchemy of Bones is more than just a true crime narrative; it is a grand, sprawling portrait of 1890s Chicago—and a nation—getting an early taste of the dark, chaotic twentieth century.

ROBERT LOERZEL is an associate editor at Pioneer Press, which publishes newspapers in the suburbs of Chicago. He has received many awards for investigative reporting and feature stories from the Illinois Press Association, the Chicago Headline Club, and the Northern Illinois Newspaper Association.

A World I Never Made
JAMES T. FARRELL
Introduction by Charles Fanning

A sprawling tale of two families’ struggles with harsh urban realities

“The influence of James Farrell’s work has been pervasive and accumulative as generation after generation of American writers continue to explore the urban subjects that Farrell so forcefully defined.”
—Stuart Dybek, author of The Coast of Chicago and other collections

The first book in Farrell’s five-volume series to be republished by the University of Illinois Press, A World I Never Made introduces three generations from two families, the working-class O’Neills and the lower-middle-class O’Flahertys. The lives of the O’Neills in particular reflect the tragic consequences of poverty, as young Danny O’Neill’s parents—unable to sustain their large family—send him to live with his grandmother. Seen here at the age of seven, Danny is fraught with feelings of anxiety and dislocation as he learns the ins and outs of life on the street, confronting for the first time a world he never made.

No Star is Lost
JAMES T. FARRELL
Introduction by Charles Fanning

The second novel in Farrell’s pentalogy picks up where A World I Never Made left off in the ongoing saga of the O’Neill and O’Flaherty families. Continuing on the theme of poverty’s effect on children, we return to scenes of Danny O’Neill’s life in Chicago, where the schism between his life in public and his private experiences at home begins to create in him a tension and bewilderment suggestive of the problems he will face in his future.

JAMES T. FARRELL (1904–79) was a native of Chicago, famous for the range and depth of his realistic portraits of the city’s various populations that he drew from his own experiences and keen powers of observation. CHARLES FANNING is a professor of English and history at Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, and the editor of Farrell’s Chicago Stories.

Karl Bodmer’s Studio Art
The Newberry Library Bodmer Collection
W. RAYMOND WOOD, JOSEPH C. PORTER, AND DAVID C. HUNT

Collected studio work from the premier documentary artist of the American West

To document the natural history and inhabitants of the American West, Prince Maximilian of Wied-Neuwied brought along Swiss artist Karl Bodmer on his 1833–34 expedition up the Missouri River. Bodmer’s landscapes and portraits—later published as aquatints and woodcuts—are now considered the most vivid depiction of the nineteenth-century American West prior to the decimation of Plains tribes by disease.

In paperback for the first time, this remarkable volume collects Bodmer’s studio augmentations of the expeditionary sketches, and brings together nearly all of Bodmer’s extant works not previously collected in book form. The book is framed by W. Raymond Wood’s introduction and annotations of the artwork, Joseph C. Porter’s examination of the expedition’s scientific and intellectual significance, and David C. Hunt’s historical summary of the publication of Bodmer’s North American work.

W. RAYMOND WOOD is a professor of anthropology at the University of Missouri–Columbia. He is coauthor of The Prehistory of Missouri. JOSEPH C. PORTER is chief curator of the North Carolina Museum of History and the author of Paper Medicine Man: John Gregory Bourke and His American West. DAVID C. HUNT is director of the Stark Museum of Art in Orange, Texas.

Sullivanesque
Urban Architecture and Ornamentation
RONALD E. SCHMITT

A visual and historical tour of a unique facet of modern American architecture

Highly regarded in architecture for inspiring the Chicago School and the Prairie School, Louis Sullivan was an unwilling instigator of the method of facade composition—later influenced by Frank Lloyd Wright, William Gray Purcell, and George G. Elmslie—that came to be known as Sullivanesque. Decorative enhancements with botanical and animal themes, Sullivan’s distinctive ornamentation mitigated the hard geometries of the buildings he designed, coinciding with his “form follows function” aesthetic.

Masterfully framed by the author’s photographs of Sullivanesque buildings in Chicago and throughout the Midwest, Ronald E. Schmitt’s in-depth exploration of the Sullivanesque tells the story of its evolution from Sullivan’s intellectual and aesthetic foundations to its place as a form of commercial vernacular. The book also includes an inventory of Sullivanesque buildings.

RONALD E. SCHMITT is a professor emeritus in the School of Architecture at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Pottery, Politics, Art
George Ohr and the Brothers Kirkpatrick
RICHARD D. MOHR

Understanding the passions fueling three of America’s most provocative potters

“Critics have long considered the [Kirkpatrick snake] jugs as propaganda for the temperance movement, but . . . Mohr postulates convincingly that the jugs were parodies and that the brothers were politically progressive. Mohr also argues that the Kirkpatricks’ influence on George Ohr’s art is significantly greater than previously thought.”
—Antique Trader

“A provocative contribution to the understanding of three major figures in the American art pottery movement, Pottery, Politics, Art provides not just new interpretations but new categories for inquiry as well. In engaging, witty, debate-generating prose, Mohr takes studies in the decorative arts to a new level of critical sophistication.”
—Nancy Owen, author of Rookwood and the Industry of Art

Pottery, Politics, Art uses the medium of clay to explore the nature of spectacle, bodies, and boundaries. The book analyzes the sexual and social obsessions of three of America’s most intense potters, artists who used the liminal potentials of clay to explore the horrors and delights of our animal selves.

The book revives from undeserved obscurity the far-southern Illinois potting brothers Cornwall and Wallace Kirkpatrick (1814–90, 1828–96) and examines the significance of the haunting, witty, and grotesque wares of the brothers’ Anna Pottery (1859–96). The book then traces the Kirkpatricks’ decisive influence on a central figure in the American arts and crafts movement, George Ohr (1857–1918), known as “the Mad Potter of Biloxi” and arguably America’s greatest potter. Finally, the book gives a new reading to Ohr’s contorted yet lyrical and ecstatic works. Abundant full-color and black-and-white photographs illustrate this remarkable art, with images of many Kirkpatrick and Ohr works being published here for the first time.

RICHARD D. MOHR is a professor of philosophy and classics at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, and has written on art and architecture for Architectural Record, Art Issues, the Journal of the American Art Pottery Association, and Style 1900.

EDITED BY PETER COZZENS

Indispensable must-reads for all Civil War buffs and historians, bringing together little-known and never before gathered first-hand accounts, articles, maps, and illustrations.

The first four volumes of Battles and Leaders of the Civil War, published in the late nineteenth century, became the best-selling and most frequently cited works ever published on the Civil War. Volume 5, assembled by the acclaimed military historian Peter Cozzens, carries on the tradition of its namesake, offering a dazzling new collection of fresh material written by military and civilian leaders, North and South, on a broad array of war-related topics. Featured articles include General Grant on the second battle of Bull Run, General Beauregard on the Shiloh campaign, General Sherman on the conference at City Point, Joshua Chamberlain on the Fredericksburg campaign, and many more. Also presented are dozens of maps and more than one hundred illustrations.

Stealing Indian Women
Native Slavery in the Illinois Country
CARL J. EKBERG

The first history of Indian slavery in the Mississippi Valley during the colonial era

“Stealing Indian Women possesses all the qualities that have become synonymous with Ekberg’s work: groundbreaking and meticulous research, engaging prose, and a unique ability to capture a sense of place and time. His richly textured account reveals practices at odds with long-held suppositions about Indian slavery in the Illinois country and, most important of all, he succeeds in attaching human faces to an institution that has been little noticed and even less understood.”
—William E. Foley, author of Wilderness Journey: The Life of William Clark

Based almost entirely on original source documents from the United States, France, and Spain, Carl J. Ekberg’s Stealing Indian Women provides a novel overview of Indian slavery in the Mississippi Valley. His detailed study of a fascinating and convoluted criminal case involving various slave women and a métis (mixed-blood) woodsman named Céladon illuminates race and gender relations, Creole culture, and the lives of Indian slaves—particularly women—in ways never before possible.

Golf and the American Country Club
RICHARD J. MOSS

A revealing look at the intertwined histories of the venerable game and controversial clubs

In this entertaining cultural history, Moss explores the circumstances that led to the establishment of the country club as an American social institution and its inextricable connection to the ancient, imported game of golf. Moss traces the evolution of country clubs from informal groups of golf-playing friends to “country estates” in the suburbs and eventually into public and private daily-fee courses, corporate country clubs, and gated golfing communities. The book shows how these developments reflect shifts in American values and attitudes toward health and sport, as well as changing social dynamics.

RICHARD J. MOSS, John J. and Cornelia V. Gibson Professor of History emeritus at Colby College, is the author of Noah Webster and other books.

How and why Americans chose baseball over its early rival, cricket, as the national pastime

George B. Kirsch takes us back to amateur playing fields around the country to re-create the excitement of the early matches, the players, clubs, and their fans. As a narrative history, Baseball and Cricket places the growing popularity of the two sports within the social context of mid-nineteenth-century American cities. The book’s comparative analysis follows baseball’s transition from a leisure sport to a commercialized, professional enterprise and offers the first complete discussion of the early American cricket clubs.

Nietzsche’s Sister and the Will to Power
A Biography of Elisabeth Förster-Nietzsche
CAROL DIETHE

A penetrating study of the sister who betrayed and endangered her famous brother’s legacy

“A pleasure to read. Diethe corrects the superficiality that has characterized prior treatment of Elisabeth Förster-Nietzsche, offering a nuanced explanation of her perspective and motivations.”
—Kathleen Higgins, author of Comic Relief, Nietzsche’s Gay Science

“Diethe does a remarkably even-handed and often insightful job of not only conveying the damage done by Elisabeth Förster-Nietzsche, but her personality as well. Her understanding of Nietzsche is obviously profound.”
—Journal of the History of Behavioral Sciences

In 1901, a year after her brother Friedrich’s death, Elisabeth Förster-Nietzsche published The Will to Power, a hasty compilation of writings he had never intended for print. In Nietzsche’s Sister and the Will to Power, Carol Diethe contends that Förster-Nietzsche’s own will to power and her desire to place herself—not her brother—at the center of cultural life in Germany are centrally responsible for Nietzsche’s reputation as a belligerent and proto-Fascist thinker.

Offering a new look at Nietzsche’s sister from a feminist perspective, this spirited and erudite biography examines why Elisabeth Förster-Nietzsche recklessly consorted with anti-Semites, from her own husband to Hitler himself, out of convenience and a desire for revenge against a brother whose love for her waned after she caused the collapse of his friendship with Lou Salomé. The book also examines their family dynamics, Nietzsche’s dismissal of his sister’s early writing career, and the effects of limited education on intelligent women. Diethe concludes by detailing Förster-Nietzsche’s brief marriage and her subsequent colonial venture in Paraguay, maintaining that her sporadic anti-Semitism was, like most things in her life, an expedient tool for cultivating personal success and status.

CAROL DIETHE, a former lecturer and research fellow at Middlesex University in London, is a founder of the British Friedrich Nietzsche Foundation. She is the author of Nietzsche’s Women: Beyond the Whip, Historical Dictionary of Nietzscheanism, and other books.

Boundaries of Touch
Parenting and Adult-Child Intimacy
JEAN O’MALLEY HALLEY

A history of the shifting and conflicting ideas about when, where, and how we should touch our children

“Raising children is such daunting work. Medical experts, parents, peers, mass media outlets, and activists engage in the production of the boundaries of what is appropriate when raising children. Halley’s Boundaries of Touch is a groundbreaking and exhaustively researched analysis of human adult-child touch. With great attention to historical and cultural detail, Halley interprets how multiple, often conflicting, groups claim expertise in adult-child relationships.”
—Lisa Jean Moore, coordinator of gender studies, Purchase College, State University of New York

Discussing issues of parent-child contact ranging from breastfeeding to sexual abuse, Jean O’Malley Halley traces the evolution of mainstream ideas about touching between adults and children over the course of the twentieth century in the United States. Debates over when a child should be weaned and whether to allow a child to sleep in the parent’s bed reveal deep differences in conceptions of appropriate adult-child contact.

Boundaries of Touch shows how arguments about adult-child touch have been politicized, simplified, and bifurcated into “naturalist” and “behaviorist” viewpoints, thereby sharpening certain binary constructions such as mind/body and male/female. Halley discusses the gendering of ideas about touch that were advanced by influential social scientists and parenting experts including Benjamin Spock, Alfred C. Kinsey, and Luther Emmett Holt. She also explores how touch ideology fared within and against the post–World War II feminist movements, especially with respect to issues of breastfeeding and sleeping with a child versus using a crib.

In addition to contemporary periodicals and self-help books on child rearing, Halley uses information gathered from interviews she conducted with mothers ranging in age from twenty-eight to seventy-three. Throughout, she reveals how the parent-child relationship, far from being a private or benign subject, continues as a highly contested, politicized affair of keen public interest.

JEAN O’MALLEY HALLEY is an assistant professor in the sociology and anthropology department at Wagner College in Staten Island, New York.

The Selected Papers of Margaret Sanger
Volume 1: The Woman Rebel, 1900–1928
EDITED BY ESTHER KATZ
Cathy Moran Hajo and Peter C. Engelman, Assistant Editors

Capturing the strident activist's complexity during a formative period

“Mesmerizing letters from the days when birth control was legally obscene and jail sentences were regularly given out for talking about it in public. Required reading for our own time, whichever side of Roe v. Wade you are on.”
—Linda K. Kerber, author of No Constitutional Right to Be Ladies: Women and the Obligations of Citizenship

The birth control crusader, feminist, and reformer Margaret Sanger was one of the most controversial and compelling figures in the twentieth century. The Selected Papers of Margaret Sanger, Volume 1 is composed of Sanger’s letters, diaries, journals, articles, and speeches, most of which have not appeared previously in print. Now in paperback, the book documents the critical phases and influences of an American feminist icon and offers rare glimpses into her working-class childhood, burgeoning feminism, spiritual and scientific interests, sexual explorations, and diverse roles as wife, mother, lover, nurse, journalist, radical socialist, and activist.

ESTHER KATZ is the director and editor of the Margaret Sanger Papers Project and associate professor of history at New York University. She is the coeditor of Women’s Experience in America.

The Moral Property of Women
A History of Birth Control Politics in America
LINDA GORDON

The most complete history of birth control ever written

“Myriad brilliant books and articles on the history of contraception and abortion have appeared during the past decade, but none offers as comprehensive an overview, as wide-ranging and invigorating a historical analysis.”
—The Historian

“Gordon joins political astuteness with historical wisdom to map an inclusive, coherent, instructive narrative of the strange and winding path of birth control advocacy and opposition.”
—Nancy F. Cott, Jonathan Turnbull Professor of American History, Harvard University

Now in paperback, The Moral Property of Women is a thoroughly updated and revised version of the award-winning historian Linda Gordon’s classic study, Woman’s Body, Woman’s Right (1976). It is the only book to cover the entire history of the intense controversies about reproductive rights that have raged in the United States for more than 150 years. Arguing that reproduction control has always been central to women’s status, Gordon shows how opposition to it has long been part of the entrenched opposition to gender equality.

LINDA GORDON, a professor of history at New York University, is the author of numerous books, including Pitied but Not Entitled: Single Mothers and the History of Welfare, 1890–1935, and The Great Arizona Orphan Abduction, which won the Bancroft Prize and the Beveridge Prize.

“Film criticism has a long history of reevaluating critically ignored and despised genres such as pornography and teen slasher films. Sexy Thrills is the first book to fully address and explore the major genre development in cinema commonly referred to as the erotic thriller. In this extremely well-researched, -organized, and -written book, Martin makes a strong case for the importance of these films from a feminist perspective.” —Peter Lehman, editor of Pornography: Film and Culture

Unlike the bulk of soft-core pornography, direct-to-video erotic thriller films are made specifically to appeal to women. Nina K. Martin argues that this makes them a valuable resource for investigating female sexuality, subjectivity, and gender construction, and her Sexy Thrills is the first study to use them to examine the construction of female desire.

The heroines of these productions have overtly sexual adventures, often dabbling in a variety of sex work positions—including call girl, stripper, and exotic dancer—to get in touch with their sexual desires. Martin explains, however, that the films highlight a fundamental tension between endorsing an empowered, sexually experienced female heroine (“the sexy bad girl”) and reinforcing more conventional, constructed standards that limit the acceptable forms of feminine sexuality. So while the sexual explicitness of the films acknowledges the increasing appeal of pornography to female heterosexual viewers, erotic thrillers remain couched in romanticized narratives and settings that speak to very traditional understandings of femininity and desire.

By analyzing the way the specifics of this hybrid genre have been shaped by pop cultural products targeting women, including soap operas, women’s magazines, and talk shows, Sexy Thrills unpacks the construction of female desire to reveal how sex is marketed to heterosexual women.

NINA K. MARTIN is an assistant professor of film studies at Emory University.
Figures of Resistance
Essays in Feminist Theory
TERESA DE LAURETIS
Edited and with an Introduction by Patricia White

The changing face of feminist discourse as reflected by the career of one of its preeminent scholars

“This is crucial work. What we find here is a scholar at the top of her form paying attention to her field, in its broadest contours and attempting to make sense of it at a key moment of transition. In terms of feminist writing on cinema, there is nobody else in de Lauretis’s league.”
—B. Ruby Rich, author of Chick Flicks: Theories and Memories of the Feminist Film Movement

“De Lauretis’s work is stimulating, innovative, and groundbreaking. Readers from a wide range of audiences will be grateful to have in a single volume the works of one of the most important feminist theorists working today.”
—Judith Mayne, Distinguished Humanities Professor, French and women’s studies, Ohio State University

Figures of Resistance brings together the unpublished lectures and little-seen essays of internationally renowned theorist Teresa de Lauretis, spanning over twenty years of her finest work. Thirty years after the height of feminist theory, this collection invites us to reflect on the history of feminism and take a hard look at where it stands today. Selected essays include “Sexual Indifference and Lesbian Representation,” “The Lure of the Mannish Lesbian,” “Eccentric Subjects,” “Habit Changes,” “The Intractability of Desire,” and the unpublished article “Figures of Resistance.” An introduction from feminist film scholar Patricia White provides an overview of the development of de Lauretis’s thought and of feminist theory over past decades.

TERESA DE LAURETIS is a professor of the history of consciousness at the University of California, Santa Cruz. She is the author of Alice Doesn’t: Feminism, Semiotics, Cinema and other books. Le Corbeau stands as the premier film about the German occupation of France. Judith Mayne’s book analyzes the film’s brilliant visual style and dark tone, and provides a guide to its many possible interpretations (in line with the period’s “cinema of paradox”).

JUDITH MAYNE, Distinguished Humanities Professor of French and Women’s Studies at Ohio State University, is the author of six books, including Claire Denis.

Cléo de 5 à 7

Remarkable even by New Wave standards, Cléo de 5 à 7 is a moving and self-reflexive film from one of the period’s very few French female directors. As Valerie Orpen explains, Agnes Varda’s film about a woman awaiting the results of her cancer test is aesthetically innovative and politically aware, as well as an excellent document of the Parisian street life of 1961.

VALERIE ORPEN is lecturer in French cinema at the University of Manchester. She is the author of Film Editing: The Art of the Expressive.

The Third Sex

WILLY
Translated and with an Introduction and Notes by Lawrence R. Schehr

A gold mine of information about a hidden queer culture

“The Third Sex is a delightful read even while it provides us with valuable information—legal, scientific, pseudo-scientific, anecdotal—toward a more complete assessment of the state of post-WWI queerdom. Lawrence Schehr is doing us a huge service in opening these pages that are like an archeological find.”
—Robert Harvey, professor of comparative literature, Stony Brook University

Thirty-two years before Simone de Beauvoir’s classic The Second Sex, popular French novelist Willy published The Third Sex, a vivid description of the world of European homosexuals in France, Italy, and Germany during the late 1920s. Stepping directly into the heart of gay men’s culture, Willy follows homosexual nightlife into music halls, nightclubs, casinos, bars, and saunas. While he finds plenty of drug and alcohol abuse, he also discovers homosexual publishers, scientific societies, group rivalries, and opinions—both medical and political—about the nature of homosexuality itself. Lawrence R. Schehr’s introduction provides context and translator’s notes for this first-ever English edition.

“WILLY” is the pseudonym of Henry Gauthier-Villars, best remembered as the husband of Colette. He hired ghost writers whose work he signed as Willy, making the name various, mysterious, and wild. LAWRENCE R. SCHEHR is a professor in the Department of French at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. He is the author French Gay Modernism and other books.

The first English translation of essays from one of the twentieth century’s most intriguing avant-garde writers

“I regard Jordan Stump as the finest translator from French of his generation, and the best imaginable fit for this long-overdue collection. It will be welcomed warmly by readers who have already whetted their appetite on Queneau’s novels.”
—Warren Motte, author of Oulipo: A Primer of Potential Literature

Compiled from two volumes of Raymond Queneau’s essays (Bâtons, chiffres et lettres and Le Voyage en Grèce), these selections find Queneau at his most playful and at his most serious, eloquently pleading for a certain classicism even as he reveals the roots of his own wildly original oeuvre. Ranging from the funny to the furious, they follow Queneau from modernism to postmodernism by way of countless fascinating detours, including his thoughts on language, literary fashions, myth, politics, poetry, and other writers (Faulkner, Flaubert, Hugo, and Proust). Translator Jordan Stump provides an introduction as well as explanatory notes about key figures and Queneau himself.

A startling record of the Jazz Age through the eyes of one of its memorable figures

Between 1922 and 1930, Carl Van Vechten—one of the most significant figures of the Harlem Renaissance—kept a daily record of his activities. The records recount his day-to-day life, as well as the alliances, drinking habits, feuds, and affairs of a wide number of the period’s luminaries, providing a rich resource for reconstructing the culture of 1920s New York and the social milieu during Prohibition. Bruce Kellner has provided copious informative notes identifying central figures and clarifying details.

CARL VAN VECHTEN (1880–1964) was a writer, photographer, and music critic famous for his popularization of African-American culture as portrayed in his 1926 novel, Nigger Heaven. BRUCE KELLNER is the biographer of Carl Van Vechten and the author of numerous books and articles on literature, art, and the theater.

Slumming in New York
From the Waterfront to Mythic Harlem
ROBERT M. DOWLING

How marginalized urban voices changed through literature from moral threats into cultural treasures

“Slumming in New York gracefully weaves together reformist tracts, sociological studies, and realist and naturalist fiction at the turn of the last century. It is rigorously interdisciplinary in its literary, historical, and sociological approach to novels, social tracts, ragtime and jazz, minstrel shows, vaudeville and Yiddish theater, and the ‘slumming’ that took place across the boundaries of race and class in New York City.”
—Katherine Joslin, author of Jane Addams, a Writer’s Life

This study samples a number of New York “slumming” narratives—including Stephen Crane’s Bowery tales, Paul Laurence Dunbar’s The Sport of the Gods, Hutchins Hapgood’s The Spirit of the Ghetto, and Carl Van Vechten’s Nigger Heaven—to characterize and examine the relationship between New York writing and the city’s cultural environment from 1880 to 1930.

Using the methods of ethnicity theory, black studies, regional studies, literary studies, and popular culture, Robert M. Dowling reveals the way in which “outsider” authors helped alleviate New York’s mounting social anxieties by popularizing “insider” voices from neighborhoods as distinctive as the East Side waterfront, the Bowery, the Tenderloin’s “black bohemia,” the Jewish Lower East Side, and Harlem.

ROBERT M. DOWLING is an assistant professor of English at Central Connecticut State University.

The Poet and the Sailor
The Story of My Friendship with Carl Sandburg
KENNETH DODSON

Edited by Richard Dodson
Foreword by Penelope Niven

Two friends, a lifetime of letters, and an intimate look at a literary icon

“The correspondence between Sandburg and Dodson suggests a considerable amount about Sandburg’s literary instincts, about how the older writer responsibly tutored the younger, and about Sandburg’s great human warmth. Even without the Sandburg connection, the Dodson letters are of great value, because they are the reflections of a bright, self-taught, sincere, and faithful man.”
—Philip R. Yannella, author of The Other Carl Sandburg

Carl Sandburg first encountered Kenneth Dodson through a letter written at sea during World War II. Though Dodson wrote the letter to his wife, Letha, Sandburg read it in tears and told her, “I’ve got to meet this man.” Composed primarily of their correspondence that continued until Sandburg’s death in 1967, The Poet and the Sailor is a chronicle of the deep friendship that followed. Ranging over anything they found important, from writing to health and humor, the letters are arranged by Richard Dodson and are accompanied by a foreword from Sandburg’s noted biographer, Penelope Niven.

KENNETH DODSON was a lieutenant in the United States Navy and author of the famous wartime memoir Away All Boats. This volume was edited by Kenneth’s late son, RICHARD DODSON, who spent over five years compiling and editing the letters and correspondence.

THEODORE DREISER

Edited by Yoshinobu Hakutani

Dreiser’s captivating portraits of turn-of-the-century America’s famous figures

“Reprints thirty-three of Dreiser’s articles [and] amounts to an informal survey of American arts and popular culture at the turn of the 20th century. . . . A particular strength of the collection is the material that reveals Dreiser’s interest in talented women.”

—Choice

Before coming to national attention for his novel Sister Carrie, Theodore Dreiser worked for nearly a decade as a magazine editor and freelance writer. Now in paperback, Art, Music, and Literature, 1897–1902 collects a rich selection of Dreiser’s brief, colorful articles and interviews with American artists, musicians, and writers during this period. His profiles and interviews include such notables as Alfred Stieglitz, William Dean Howells, and legendary impresario Major James Burton Pond, as well as numerous women artists, novelists, and musicians. The volume is liberally seasoned with period illustrations reproduced from the original publications, and Yoshinobu Hakutani’s notes provide biographical details about Dreiser’s various subjects.

YOSHINOBU HAKUTANI is professor of English and University Distinguished Scholar at Kent State University. He is the author or editor of many books, including Cross-Cultural Visions in African American Modernism, Theodore Dreiser’s Uncollected Magazine Articles, Theodore Dreiser and American Culture, Selected Magazine Articles of Theodore Dreiser, and Young Dreiser.

THEODORE DREISER

Edited by Donald Pizer

Correspondence capturing Dreiser’s own take on his long and eventful life

“A fascinating and indispensable addition to the Dreiser canon.”

—Miles Orvell, professor of English and American studies, Temple University

“Donald Pizer’s new book proves he is among the best, if not the best, editor and compiler working the field of American literature. Combining an impressive command of the era with an unmatched knowledge of Dreiser’s life, Pizer has brought the letters to life, filling in both the foreground and background of the letters and bringing continuity to what easily could have become a series of disparate documents.”

—Richard Lehan, editor of Theodore Dreiser: Sister Carrie, Jennie Gerhardt, Twelve Men

In addition to his novels, short stories, plays, poetry, and a flood of journalism, Theodore Dreiser is estimated to have written an astonishing 20,000 letters. A Picture and a Criticism of Life presents a selection from his previously unpublished letters and shows Dreiser in every mood and circumstance, from crisply professional to happily unbuttoned. Meticulously annotated by Donald Pizer, the selections often shed significant new light on the writer’s beliefs and activities during the various stages of his long career.

DONALD PIZER is Pierce Butler Professor of English emeritus at Tulane University. His many books include The Novels of Theodore Dreiser.

The Genius
THEODORE DREISER
Edited by Clare Virginia Eby

The definitive scholarly edition of Dreiser’s original version of the novel, in print for the first time

“This is a superb edition: skillfully edited, fully annotated, usefully contextualized. We have been given a new and almost entirely unknown version of The Genius—the text as originally conceived by Dreiser. It now demands our attention and close study.”
—James L. W. West III, general editor of the Cambridge Fitzgerald Edition

“The Genius is one of the most overlooked and underrated of Dreiser’s novels, yet it is arguably the key book for students of the writer. Clare Eby’s presentation of this earlier and previously unpublished Genius is a triumph of textual and interpretive scholarship.”
—Miles Orvell, author of The Real Thing: Imitation and Authenticity in American Culture, 1880–1940

Thoroughly immersed in the turn-of-the-century art scene, Theodore Dreiser’s autobiographical The Genius explores the multiple conflicts between art and business, art and marriage, and between traditional and modern views of sexual morality. Despite heavy editing before its 1915 publication, The Genius was deemed so shocking that its sale was immediately prohibited by the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice. Eventually released in 1923, the novel confirmed Dreiser’s status as a writer ahead of his time.

Clare Virginia Eby’s new edition brings to print for the first time Dreiser’s original version of the novel as he composed it in 1911. The protagonist Eugene Witla, as well as the women he loves, emerge as very different characters than they appear in the 1915 edition and the ending takes a markedly different turn. Dreiser’s attention to female characters’ inner lives and their passions, sexual and otherwise, also renders them more comprehensible and sympathetic. Long understood as the most autobiographical of Dreiser’s novels, this new edition suggests a younger, less assertive Dreiser whose mature ideas of self, masculinity, artistic achievement, and worldly success were still in the process of formation.

CLARE VIRGINIA EBY is a professor of English at the University of Connecticut. Her many books include Dreiser and Veblen, Saboteurs of the Status Quo.

Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians

VIRGINIA WARING

Foreword by Robert Shaw

The life and music of “the man who taught America how to sing”

“This book made me miss Fred all over again. His music, his fun, his personality, his adventures. . . . It’s a fascinating story of show business from the early days to the present. I love it!”

—Mort Walker, creator of Beetle Bailey

Famous American, chorus leader, showman, glee club pioneer, golf tournament host, and entrepreneur—Fred Waring was all of these and more, an enigma who held together a major musical organization for sixty-seven years, a man at ease on stage but loathe to sit through meetings, a man so earnest in his patriotism that by the 1980s he was considered almost an endangered species.

Virginia Waring, his wife of thirty years, chronicles both his many achievements and his shortcomings with candor and affection in Fred Waring and the Pennsylvanians. Her gracefully written biography traces Waring’s childhood in Tyrone, Pennsylvania, his rise to fame as a band-leader, development and promotion of the Waring Blender, leadership of Shawnee Press, concert tours, radio and television programs, and his legacy of the highest possible standards in music as in life.

This intimate portrait of an American legend is accompanied by a compact disc with twenty-eight selections recorded by the Pennsylvanians over a forty-year period. They range from Adam Geibel and Tom Waring’s “Sleep,” recorded in 1928, through Cole Porter’s “Love for Sale,” Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach’s “Smoke Gets in Your Eyes,” the traditional “Sometimes I Feel like a Motherless Child” and “Dry Bones,” to Kurt Weill and Maxwell Anderson’s “September Song” and Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein’s “Some Enchanted Evening.”

A native Californian, VIRGINIA WARING is a concert pianist who studied in Paris with Robert Casadesus and toured for ten years as the Morley half of the famed duo-pianists Morley and Gearhart. She was married to Fred Waring from 1954 until his death in 1984.

Together Let Us Sweetly Live
The Singing and Praying Bands

JONATHAN C. DAVID

With photographs by Richard Holloway

A forgotten and beautiful African American folk tradition reexamined

Together Let Us Sweetly Live offers a rare look at the unique grassroots African American religious institutions called the Singing and Praying Bands. This folksong and ring shout tradition began in Chesapeake Bay country in the early nineteenth century, with a fusion of Methodist prayer meeting worship and African religious, danced song traditions. Although scholars have assumed ring shouts died out long ago, Jonathan C. David shows otherwise, ushering us inside tidewater communities of Maryland and Delaware where they continue to thrive.

A traditional band service represents a cultural commitment to mutual aid, called “help,” operating as a system of social reciprocity, as a performance aesthetic, and as the foundation of community spirituality. The book’s nine chapters tell the story of the Singing and Praying Bands at these services through oral histories, each told by a different member of a group. Seventy-eight photographs along with various song notations bring the spirit of the culture to life. The author’s introduction provides the historical and ethnographic context needed to understand the bands and their tradition. An accompanying CD of original field recordings provides an opportunity to hear the service as if you were there.

JONATHAN C. DAVID is an independent scholar living in Philadelphia. African-American Women Composers and Their Music

HELEN WALKER-HILL

Exploding the assumption that black women’s only important musical contributions have been in folk, jazz, and pop

Helen Walker-Hill’s unique study provides a carefully researched examination of the history and scope of musical composition by African American women composers from the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Focusing on the effect of race, gender, and class, From Spirituals to Symphonies notes the important role played by individual personalities and circumstances in shaping this underappreciated category of American art. The study also provides in-depth exploration of the backgrounds, experiences, and musical compositions of eight African American women including Margaret Bonds, Undine Smith Moore, and Julia Perry, who combined the techniques of Western art music with their own cultural traditions and individual gifts. Despite having gained national and international recognition during their lifetimes, the contributions of many of these women are today forgotten.

Edited by John Edgar Tidwell

Recovering politically potent poems from the long-lost father of modern black poetry

“Tidwell rightfully proclaims that Frank Marshall Davis is a powerful voice that should not be forgotten.”

Black Moods collects for the first time all of Frank Marshall Davis’s extant published poems as well as his previously unpublished work. From sharp-edged sketches of Southside Chicago’s urban landscape to the prismatic world that lay beneath Hawaii’s placid surface, Davis’s muscular poems blend social, cultural, and political concerns—always shaped by his promise to “try to be as direct as good blues.”

John Edgar Tidwell’s introduction examines both Davis’s poetry and his politics, presenting a subtle portrait of a complex writer devoted to exposing discriminatory practices and reaffirming the humanity of the common people.

The sharp wit of a free-thinking Mormon folk hero

“The J. Golden Kimball Stories is an accessible, entertaining, and intelligent survey and interpretation of folk humor regarding one of the American West’s most significant legendary figures. Although written from the point of view of an LDS insider, Eliason’s reading of these wonderful stories transcends insularity through its solid scholarship, circumspection, and honesty.”
—James P. Leary, professor of folklore and Scandinavian studies, University of Wisconsin

In The J. Golden Kimball Stories, beloved and iconoclastic Mormon humorist J. Golden Kimball (1853–1938) speaks on death, marriage, love, hell, God, and everything in between. Compiled by Eric A. Eliason from previously unpublished archival resources, this collection of stories, anecdotes, and jokes captures the irreverent comedy and independent thinking that made Kimball so beloved both in and out of his Mormon community.

Arranged thematically and framed by short contextual introductions, each chapter presents a colorful portrait of Kimball on topics including tricks, cussing, ministering, chastising, and repentance. A comprehensive introductory essay places Kimball in the context of Mormon history and folklore scholarship.

Cancer Activism
Gender, Media, and Public Policy
KAREN M. KEDROWSKI AND
Marilyn StinE Sarow

The first comparison of the breast cancer and the prostate cancer movements

Cancer Activism explores the interplay between advocacy, the media, and public perception through an analysis of breast cancer and prostate cancer activist groups over a nearly twenty-year period. Despite both diseases having nearly identical mortality and morbidity rates, Karen M. Kedrowski and Marilyn Stine Sarow present evidence from more than 4,200 news articles to show that the different groups have had markedly different impacts. They trace the rise of each movement from its beginning and explore how discussions about the diseases appeared on media, public, and government agendas. In an important exception to the feminist tenet that women as a group hold less power than men, Kedrowski and Sarow demonstrate that the breast cancer movement is not only larger and better organized than the prostate cancer movement, it is also far more successful at shaping media coverage, public opinion, and government policy.

KAREN M. KEDROWSKI is professor and chair of the department of political science at Winthrop University in Rock Hill, South Carolina, and the author of Media Entrepreneurs and the Media Enterprise in the U.S. Congress. MARILYN STINE SAROW is an associate professor of mass communication at Winthrop University, and coauthor of Integrated Business Communication in a Global Marketplace.

The Scripps Newspapers Go to War, 1914–18
DALE ZACHER

A telling look at the inner workings of one of the nation’s most dominant news outlets during wartime

In an age before radio and television, E. W. Scripps’s ownership of twenty-one newspapers, a major news wire service, and a prominent news syndication service represented the first truly national media organization in the United States. In The Scripps Newspapers Go to War, 1914–18, Dale Zacher details the scope, organization, and character of the mighty Scripps empire during World War I to reveal how the pressures of the market, government censorship, propaganda, and progressivism transformed news coverage during wartime.

This volume presents the first systematic look at the daily operations of any major newspaper operation during World War I and provides fascinating accounts of how the papers struggled with competition, their patriotic duties, and internal editorial dissent. The book also engages questions about American neutrality and the newspapers’ relationship with President Woodrow Wilson, the move to join the war, and the fallout from the disillusionment of actually experiencing war. Ultimately, Zacher shows how the progressive spirit and political independence at the Scripps newspapers came under attack and was forever changed by this crucial period in American history.

DALE ZACHER is an assistant professor at the School of Mass Communication at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

Red Chicago
American Communism at Its Grassroots, 1928–35
RANDI STORCH

Realities of the street-level American Communist experience during the worst years of the Depression

Red Chicago is a social history of American Communism set within the context of Chicago’s neighborhoods, industries, and radical traditions. Using local party records, oral histories, union records, party newspapers, and government documents, Randi Storch fills the gap between Leninist principles and the day-to-day activities of Chicago’s rank-and-file Communists.

Uncovering rich new evidence from Moscow’s former party archive, Storch argues that although the American Communist Party was an international organization strongly influenced by the Soviet Union, at the city level it was a more vibrant and flexible organization responsible to local needs and concerns. Thus, while working for a better welfare system, fairer unions, and racial equality, Chicago’s Communists created a movement that at times departed from international party leaders’ intentions. By focusing on the experience of Chicago’s Communists, who included a large working-class, African American, and ethnic population, this study reexamines party members’ actions as an integral part of the communities in which they lived and the industries where they worked.

Beer and Revolution
The German Anarchist Movement in New York City, 1880–1914
TOM GOYENS

Understanding an infamous political movement's grounding in festivity and defiance

“Beer and Revolution is an extraordinary piece of work, and a rare find. I am astonished at the level of sophistication: it advances recent scholarly developments in charting geopolitical space and resurrects the kind of setting—a mixture of bohemianism and political radicalism—that is of increasing interest to young people today.”—Paul Buhle, coeditor of the Encyclopedia of the American Left

Beer and Revolution examines the rollicking life and times of German immigrant anarchists in New York City from 1880 to 1914. Offering a new approach to an often misunderstood political movement, Tom Goyens puts a human face on anarchism and reveals a dedication less to bombs than to beer halls and saloons where political meetings, public lectures, discussion circles, fundraising events, and theater groups were held.

Goyens brings to life the fascinating relationship between social space and politics by examining how the intersection of political ideals, entertainment, and social activism embodied anarchism not as an abstract idea, but as a chosen lifestyle for thousands of women and men. He shows how anarchist social gatherings were themselves events of defiance and resistance that aimed at establishing anarchism as an alternative lifestyle through the combination of German working-class conviviality and a dedication to the principle that coercive authority was not only unnecessary, but actually damaging to full and free human development as well. Goyens also explores the broader circumstances in both the United States and Germany that served as catalysts for the emergence of anarchism in urban America and how anarchist activism was hampered by police surveillance, ethnic insularity, and a widening gulf between the anarchists’ message and the majority of American workers.

TOM GOYENS teaches American history at Randolph-Macon College in Ashland, Virginia.

Wobblies on the Waterfront
Interracial Unionism in Progressive-Era Philadelphia
PETER COLE

The rise and fall of America’s first truly interracial labor union

For almost a decade during the 1910s and 1920s, the Philadelphia waterfront was home to the most durable interracial, multiethnic union seen in the United States prior to the CIO era. For much of its time, Local 8 was majority black, always with a cadre of black leaders. The union also claimed immigrants from Eastern Europe, as well as many Irish Americans, who had a notorious reputation for racism. This important study is the first book-length examination of how Local 8, affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World, accomplished what no other did at the time. Peter Cole outlines the factors that were instrumental in Local 8’s success, both ideological (the IWW’s commitment to working-class solidarity) and pragmatic (racial divisions helped solidify employer dominance). He also shows how race was central not only to the rise but also to the decline of Local 8, as increasing racial tensions were manipulated by employers and federal agents bent on the union’s destruction.

PETER COLE is an associate professor of history at Western Illinois University.

Race, Jobs, and the War
ANDREW E. KERSTEN

A richly detailed look at the crucial role of federally supported civil rights activism

“Race, Jobs, and the War is a superb book, one that deftly illuminates the turbulent history of the FEPC.”
—Clete Daniel, author of Chicano Workers and the Politics of Fairness: The FEPC in the Southwest, 1941–1945

In this rigorous and thoroughly documented study focusing on the pivotal Midwest, Andrew E. Kersten shows how a tiny government agency—the President’s Committee on Fair Employment Practice (FEPC)—influenced the course of civil rights reform, moving the United States closer to a national fair employment policy and laying the foundation for today’s contested affirmative action practices.

Rejecting claims that black advancement during the war was due primarily to shortages of labor, Race, Jobs, and the War contends that the FEPC made significant strides in breaking racial barriers, settling complaints, and pursuing a vigorous educational campaign to foster more harmonious industrial relations between white and minority workers.

ANDREW E. KERSTEN is an associate professor of history and chair of the Social Change and Development Department at the University of Wisconsin at Green Bay.

The Rural Face of White Supremacy
Beyond Jim Crow
MARK SCHULTZ

The surprising realities of rural race relations during the Jim Crow era

“An unusually rich and dense portrait... Schultz’s compelling, detailed account illuminates the basic fact of southern history: the two races have always been inextricably bound together.”
—The Atlantic Monthly

“Historians and general readers will profit from this rich work. Essential.”
—Choice

Now in paperback, The Rural Face of White Supremacy presents a detailed study of the daily experiences of ordinary people in rural Hancock County, Georgia. Drawing on his own interviews with over two hundred black and white residents, Mark Schultz argues that the residents acted on the basis of personal rather than institutional relationships. As a result, Hancock County residents experienced more intimate face-to-face interactions, which made possible more black agency than their urban counterparts were allowed. While they were still firmly entrenched within an exploitive white supremacist culture, this relative freedom did create a space for a range of interracial relationships that included mixed housing, midwifery, church services, meals, and even common-law marriages.

MARK SCHULTZ is an associate professor of history at Lewis University in Romeoville, Illinois.

Crossing the Border
A Free Black Community in Canada
SHARON A. ROGER HEPBURN

A story of freedom and flourishing in a community of former slaves

“Neither a fairy tale of living happily ever after nor a litany of disappointments, Crossing the Border tells of real people who changed their lives and made new ones under the North Star.”
—David I. Macleod, professor of history, Central Michigan University

In 1849, the Reverend William King and fifteen of his former slaves founded the Canadian settlement of Buxton on a 9,000-acre block of land in Ontario set aside for sale to blacks. Although initially opposed by some neighboring whites, their town grew steadily in population and stature with the backing of the Presbyterian Church of Canada and various philanthropics. A developed agricultural community that supported three schools, four churches, a hotel, and a post office, Buxton was home to almost seven hundred residents at its height. The settlement (which still exists today) remained all black until 1860, when its land was opened to purchase by whites. Sharon A. Roger Hepburn’s Crossing the Border tells the story of Buxton’s settlers, united in their determination to live free from slavery and legal repression. It is the most comprehensive study to address life in a black community in Canada.

Labor, Free and Slave

Workingmen and the Anti-Slavery Movement in the United States

BERNARD MANDEL

Introduction by Brian Kelly

A classic piece of Old Left scholarship made available to a new generation of students and activists

“This edition will bring historians’ attention back to a great but no longer known work from the past. Brian Kelly’s excellent introduction provides a biography of Mandel, places his book in the context of writings on U.S. history, and presents the critique of whiteness studies implicit in Mandel’s thought in a clear and provocative fashion.”

—David Montgomery, author of Fall of the House of Labor

Bernard Mandel’s classic study provides a concise overview of the relationship between organized abolitionism and the fledgling labor movement in the period before the Civil War. Mandel argues that slavery reinforced the powerlessness of white workers North and South, and the racial divisions that it upheld rendered effective labor solidarity impossible. Deep distrust between abolitionists and the working classes, however, compelled Northern workers to find their own way into the antislavery ranks.

BERNARD MANDEL was an independent scholar who also published a biography of Samuel Gompers. BRIAN KELLY is a senior lecturer in the School of History at Queen’s University, Belfast, Ireland. He is the author of Race, Class, and Power in the Alabama Coalfields, 1908–1921.

Gender and Slavery in Antebellum Georgia

DAINA RAMEY BERRY

Examining how labor and economy shaped the family life of bondwomen and bondmen in the antebellum South

“Swing the Sickle for the Harvest Is Ripe” compares the work, family, and economic experiences of enslaved women and men in upcountry and lowland Georgia during the nineteenth century. Mining planters’ daybooks, plantation records, and a wealth of other sources, Daina Ramey Berry shows how slaves’ experiences on large plantations, which were essentially self-contained, closed communities, contrasted with those on small plantations, where planters’ interests in sharing their workforce allowed slaves more open, fluid communications. By inviting readers into slaves’ internal lives through her detailed examination of domestic violence, separation and sale, and forced breeding, Berry also reveals important new ways of understanding what it meant to be a female or male slave, as well as how public and private aspects of slave life influenced each other on the plantation.

DAINA RAMEY BERRY is an associate professor of history at Michigan State University.

The Early Black History Movement, Carter G. Woodson, and Lorenzo Johnston Greene

PERO GAGLO DAGBOVIE

The men who launched and shaped black studies

This book examines the lives, work, and contributions of two of the most important figures of the early black history movement, Carter G. Woodson and Lorenzo Johnston Greene. Drawing on the two men’s personal papers as well as the materials of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History (ASNLH), Pero Gaglo Dagbovie probes the struggles, sacrifices, and achievements of these black history pioneers. The book offers the first major examination of Greene’s life. Equally important, it also addresses a variety of issues pertaining to Woodson that other scholars have either overlooked or ignored, including his image in popular and scholarly writings and memory, the democratic approach of the ASNLH, and the pivotal role of women in the association.

PERO GAGLO DAGBOVIE is an assistant professor of African American history at Michigan State University.

The Funding of Scientific Racism

Wickliffe Draper and the Pioneer Fund

WILLIAM H. TUCKER

New evidence about the use and abuse of science in support of bigotry

Established in 1937 by wealthy businessman Wickliffe Draper, the nonprofit Pioneer Fund has long been accused of misusing social science to fuel the politics of oppression by supporting research that seeks to establish the genetic and intellectual inferiority of blacks.

Although the Pioneer Fund denies its ties to any political agenda, this powerful and provocative volume reveals the truth behind their long history of clandestine activities. The Funding of Scientific Racism examines for the first time archival correspondence that incriminates the fund’s major players, revealing links to a Klansman’s crusade to repatriate blacks, as well as efforts to reverse the Brown decision, prevent passage of the Civil Rights Act, and implement a system of racially segregated private schools.

WILLIAM H. TUCKER is a professor of psychology at Rutgers University and the author of the award-winning The Science and Politics of Racial Research.

Christian Sisterhood, Race Relations, and the YWCA, 1906–46
NANCY MARIE ROBERTSON

Black and white women's struggles over race relations in the YWCA and beyond

As the major national biracial women’s organization, the Young Women’s Christian Association (YWCA) provided a unique venue for women to respond to American race relations during the first half of the twentieth century. In Christian Sisterhood, Race Relations, and the YWCA, 1906–46, Nancy Marie Robertson shows how women of both races employed different understandings of “Christian sisterhood” in their responses. Although the YWCA was segregated at the local level, African American women were able to effectively challenge white women over YWCA racial policies and practices. Robertson argues that from 1906 through 1946, many white women in the association went from seeing segregation as compatible with Christianity and democracy to regarding it as a contradiction of those values. These struggles laid the groundwork for the subsequent civil rights movement. Her analysis relies not only on a large body of records documenting YWCA women at the national and local levels, but also on autobiographical accounts and personal papers from women associated with the YWCA, including Dorothy Height, Lugenia Burns Hope, Alice Dunbar-Nelson, Abby Aldrich Rockefeller, and Lillian Smith.

NANCY MARIE ROBERTSON is an associate professor of history and philanthropic studies at Indiana University–Purdue University Indianapolis, where she also directs the women’s studies program.

The Women’s Joint Congressional Committee and the Politics of Maternalism, 1920–30
JAN DOOLITTLE WILSON

The rise and fall of a feminist reform powerhouse

This is the first comprehensive history of the Women’s Joint Congressional Committee (WJCC), a large umbrella organization founded by former suffrage leaders in 1920 in order to coordinate organized women’s reform. Encompassing nearly every major national women’s organization of its time, the WJCC evolved into a powerful lobbying force for the legislative agendas of twelve million women, and was recognized by critics and supporters alike as “the most powerful lobby in Washington.”

Through a close examination of the WJCC’s most consequential and contentious campaigns, Jan Doolittle Wilson demonstrates organized women’s strategies and initial success in generating congressional and grassroots support for their far-reaching, progressive reforms. By using the WJCC as a lens through which to analyze women’s political culture during the 1920s, the book also sheds new light on the initially successful ways women lobbied for social legislation, the inherent limitations of that process for pursuing class-based reforms, and the enormous difficulties faced by women trying to expand public responsibility for social welfare in the years following the Nineteenth Amendment’s passage.

JAN DOOLITTLE WILSON is an assistant professor of history at Central Michigan University.

“Let Something Good Be Said”
The Speeches and Writings of Frances E. Willard
EDITED BY CAROLYN DE SWARTE GIFFORD
AND AMY R. SLAGELL

The definitive collection of speeches and writings of one of America’s most important social reformers

“This collection is perfect, offering the best of Willard without overwhelming the reader. The documents chosen illustrate Willard’s uncanny political sense and ability to turn a phrase, as well as her personal trajectory through the halls of temperance into the wide arena of national and international reforms.”
—Mari Jo Buhle, William R. Kenan, Jr. University Professor of American civilization and history, Brown University

Thought to be the most famous woman in America at the time of her death, Frances E. Willard was best known for leading America’s largest women’s organization (the Woman’s Christian Temperance Union), which shaped both domestic and international opinion on major political, economic, and social reform issues. Including Willard’s representative speeches and published writings on everything from temperance and women’s rights to the new labor movement and Christian socialism, “Let Something Good Be Said” is the first volume to collect the messages that inspired a generation of women to activism.

CAROLYN DE SWARTE GIFFORD is a visiting scholar in gender studies at Northwestern University and editor of Writing Out My Heart: Selections from the Journal of Frances E. Willard (1855–1896). AMY R. SLAGELL is an associate professor and directs the speech communication program in the Department of English at Iowa State University.

Two Sisters for Social Justice: A Biography of Grace and Edith Abbott
LELA B. COSTIN
Yugoslav-Americans and National Security during World War II
LORRAINE M. LEES

The first intensive study of FDR’s foreign nationalities policy

Lorraine M. Lees explores the persistent tension between ethnicity and national security by focusing on the Yugoslav-American community during World War II. Identified by the Roosevelt administration as the most representative example of the ethnic conflict they sought to address, the Yugoslav-American community suffered from a severe political split, as right-wing monarchists loyal to Mihajlović and the Chetniks battled left-wing supporters of Tito’s partisans.

Lees examines the views of two groups of administration policy makers: one that perceived America’s European ethnic groups as rife with divided loyalties, and hence a danger to national security; and a second that viewed such communities as valuable sources for political intelligence that would help the war effort in Europe. Yugoslav-Americans and National Security during World War II is significant not only to understanding the Roosevelt administration’s equation of ethnicity with disloyalty, but also for its insights into similar attitudes that have arisen throughout periods of crisis in American history as well as today.

LORRAINE M. LEES is an associate professor of history at Old Dominion University in Virginia and the author of Keeping Tito Afloat: The United States, Yugoslavia, and the Cold War.

From Racism to Genocide
Anthropology in the Third Reich
GRETCHEN E. SCHAFFT

Astounding new information about the role of anthropologists in Hitler’s efforts to create a “master race”

“As Racism to Genocide is one of the more important books on the history of anthropology to be published in the last three decades. Schafft not only breaks this silence using unsettling and rich documentation, but she provides nuanced interpretations and ethical critiques of these anthropological misapplications.”
—David H. Price, Anthropological Quarterly

In paperback for the first time, From Racism to Genocide is an explosive, richly detailed account of how Nazi anthropologists justified racism, developed practical applications of racist theory, and eventually participated in every phase of the Holocaust.

Using original sources and previously unpublished documentation, Gretchen E. Schafft shows the total range of antihuman activity from within the confines of a particular discipline. Based on seven years of archival research in the United States and abroad, the work includes many original photos and documents, most of which have never before been published. It uses primary data and original texts whenever possible, including correspondence written by perpetrators. The book also reveals that the United States was not merely a bystander in this research, but instead contributed professional and financial support to early racial research that continued through the first five years of Hitler’s regime.

GRETCHEN E. SCHAFFT is applied anthropologist-in-residence at the American University in Washington, D.C.

John Dewey and the Philosophy and Practice of Hope
STEPHEN M. FISHER AND LUCILLE MCCARTHY

Inspiring new techniques for engaging students with democratic ideals

“Fishman and McCarthy each bring unique tools to their classroom inquiries, and the results are wonderfully readable and illuminating. Their work and humanity point the way for educators to act against civic decline and for civic renewal.” —Ira Shor, professor of composition and rhetoric, City University of New York Graduate School

John Dewey and the Philosophy and Practice of Hope combines philosophical theory with a study of its effects in an actual classroom. To understand how Dewey, one of the century’s foremost philosophers of education, understood the concept of hope, Stephen Fishman begins with theoretical questions like: What is hope? What are its objects? How can hope foster a new understanding of democracy and social justice?

The book’s second half is a classroom study that mirrors in practice what Fishman explores in theory, as Lucille McCarthy observes Fishman’s undergraduate students reading the theorists. Illustrating students’ own vital engagement with the hope literature, McCarthy reveals how the discussions deepen student understandings, simultaneously showing education’s power to promote hope and turn social ideals into reality.

STEPHEN M. FISHER is a professor of philosophy at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. LUCILLE MCCARTHY is a professor of English at the University of Maryland, Baltimore County. They have coauthored a number of books, including John Dewey and the Challenge of Classroom Practice.

Brutal
Manhood and the Exploitation of Animals
BRIAN LUKE

The first integrated theory of manhood’s relationship to hunting, animal experimentation, and animal sacrifice

“This original and cutting-edge work challenges myths and misconceptions that are used to legitimate human, particularly male, exploitation of other animals. Luke supplements his arguments against notions of human superiority, natural species boundaries, and the naturalness of male predation with original insights that expose the shallowness of traditional speciesist thought. He then goes where few writers have gone before when he examines the eroticized nature of men’s exploitation of other animals.” —David Nibert, author of Animal Rights/Human Rights: Entanglements of Oppression and Liberation

In Brutal, Brian Luke explores the gender divide over our treatment of animals, exposing the central role of masculinity in systems of animal exploitation. Employing philosophical analysis, reference to empirical research, and relevant personal experience, Luke develops a new theory of how exploitative institutions do not work to promote human flourishing but instead merely act as support for a particular construction of manhood. The resulting work is of significant interest both to animal advocates and opponents of sexism.

Formerly an assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Dayton, BRIAN LUKE is currently a student at Trinity Lutheran Seminary in Columbus, Ohio.

Books of Secrets
Natural Philosophy in England, 1550–1600
ALLISON KAVEY

How cultural categories shaped—and were shaped by—new ideas about controlling nature

“An impressive achievement. Books of Secrets brings together realms too often left disparate in contemporary scholarship: gender studies, history of science, and book history. It is fascinating how Kavey deftly traces fungible notions of agency across various materials and explanations, and this refusal to settle for easy answers is one of the book’s many virtues. The answers it gives are all the more profound, and persuasive, for the effort.”
—Michael Schoenfeldt, author of Bodies and Selves in Early Modern England

Ranging from alchemy to necromancy, “books of secrets” offered medieval readers an affordable and accessible collection of knowledge about the natural world. Allison Kavey’s study traces the cultural relevance of these books and also charts their influence on the people who read them. Citing the importance of printers in choosing the books’ contents, she points out how these books legitimized manipulating nature, thereby expanding cultural categories, such as masculinity, femininity, gentleman, lady, and midwife, to include the willful command of the natural world.

ALLISON KAVEY is an assistant professor of history at the City University of New York’s John Jay College of Criminal Justice.

Science and Scientism in Nineteenth-Century Europe
RICHARD G. OLSON

Exploring the natural scientific foundations of far-reaching social ideologies

The nineteenth century produced scientific and cultural revolutions that forever transformed modern European life. Although these critical developments are often studied independently, Richard G. Olson’s Science and Scientism in Nineteenth-Century Europe provides an integrated account of the history of science and its impact on intellectual and social trends of the day. Focusing on the natural scientific foundations underlying liberalism, socialism, positivism, communism, and social Darwinism, Olson explores how these movements employed science to clarify their own understanding of Enlightenment ideals, as well as their understanding of progress, religion, industry, imperialism, and racism. Starting with the impact of the French Revolution on scientific thought, Olson engages with key texts from J. B. Say, Henri Saint-Simon, Kant, Goethe, Darwin, Walter Bagehot, and Edward Bellamy to demonstrate the complex set of forces that shaped nineteenth-century thinking.

RICHARD G. OLSON is a professor of history and the Willard W. Keith Jr. Fellow in Humanities at Harvey Mudd College in Claremont, California. He is the author of Science and Religion, 1400–1900: From Copernicus to Darwin, Scottish Philosophy and British Physics, 1750–1850: Foundations of the Victorian Scientific Style, and other books.

The Complete Fables of Jean de La Fontaine

JEAN DE LA FONTAINE

Translated by Norman R. Shapiro
Illustrations by David Schorr
Foreword by John Hollander

Inspired new translations of the work of one of the world's greatest fabulists

“Shapiro’s skills, and certainly his prolific output, as a translator of French poetry are unsurpassed in our time.”
—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

“Norman Shapiro is a wonderfully lively and resourceful translator, who knows how to put French wit and charm into English.”
—Richard Wilbur, former poet laureate of the United States

Told in an elegant style, Jean de La Fontaine’s (1621–95) charming animal fables depict sly foxes and scheming cats, vain birds and greedy wolves, all of which subtly express his penetrating insights into French society and the beasts found in all of us. Norman R. Shapiro has been translating La Fontaine’s fables for over twenty years, capturing the original work’s lively mix of plain and archaic language. This newly complete translation is destined to set the English standard for this work.

A celebrated translator, NORMAN R. SHAPIRO is a professor of Romance languages and literatures at Wesleyan University. He is the translator of The Fabulists French: Verse Fables of Nine Centuries and the author or translator of many other books.

Aesopica

A Series of Texts Relating to Aesop or Ascribed to Him

NEW EDITION

BEN EDWIN PERRY

The most complete corpus of the proverbs and fables of Aesop ever assembled

“Nothing approaching this in magnitude has existed before and it is safe to say that all future study of the Aesopic tradition will rest on this vast collection and careful sifting of the basic texts.”
—American Journal of Philology

“‘Monumental’ is the only appropriate word to describe this work.”
—Journal of Oriental Languages

Ben Edwin Perry’s Aesopica remains the definitive edition of all fables reputed to be by Aesop. The volume begins traditionally with a life of Aesop, but in two different and previously unedited Greek versions, with collations that record variations in the major recensions. It includes 179 proverbs attributed to Aesop and 725 carefully organized fables, for which Perry also provides their earliest known sources. To better evaluate the place of Aesop in literary history, Perry includes testimonies about Aesop made by Greek and Latin authors, from Herodotus to Maximus Planudes.

BEN EDWIN PERRY (1892–1968) was a professor of classics at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign from 1924 until his retirement in 1960 and author of Studies in the Text History of the Life and Fables of Aesop, The Aesopic Fable in the Orient, and many other books.

Technologies of Magic: A Cultural Study of Ghosts, Machines, and the Uncanny
EDITED BY JOHN POTTS AND EDWARD SCHEER

Technologies of Magic collects essays that investigate the coexistence of very old forms of thought—belief in ghosts, magic, spirits—and contemporary culture. Offering a new way of thinking about technology in today’s world, this distinctive collection frames ghosts and magic as fundamentally performative—performing new kinds of cultural work in the world. Modern ghosts are not asked to identify themselves, but are instead made to account for the work they do.

Jacques Derrida: Deconstruction Engaged The Sydney Seminars
EDITED BY PAUL PATTON AND TERRY SMITH

At his two Sydney seminars of August 1999, Jacques Derrida presented some of the principal themes of his work to non-specialist audiences. His willingness to engage with both interlocutors and the audience ensured an exciting demonstration of the subtlety and flexibility of deconstructive thinking in action. This volume presents the edited transcripts of those sessions, and provides a clear, systematic, and highly accessible introduction to many central concerns of Derrida’s engagement with philosophy, visual art, and politics.

FRIENDS OF COMMUNITY PUBLIC ART

A unique look at public art in Illinois

This volume presents forty-one sculptures created between 1998 and 2006 by the Friends of Community Public Art in Joliet, Illinois. Cast in bronze, limestone, fiberglass, or steel, and frequently mounted on mosaic-covered columns located throughout the city’s public places, the sculptures run the gamut from highly detailed realism to abstraction, documenting the exciting artistic renaissance in the city of Joliet and its determination to renew and distinguish itself through public art and culture. Featured sculptors include Kathleen Farrell, Kathleen Scarboro, Jesus Rodriguez, Sarah Furst, Marsh Lega, Kelly Gallaher, and Sharka Glet. Filled with 120 color photographs, the volume also includes poetry commissioned from Joliet and Chicago-area poets specifically for each piece.

FRIENDS OF COMMUNITY PUBLIC ART is a not-for-profit organization of local artists who work to beautify the city of Joliet, Illinois, with murals, mosaics, and sculpture.

J. S. Bach’s Concerted Ensemble Music: The Concerto

Edited by Gregory Butler

Continuing the reevaluation of Bach’s concertos

The creativity of J. S. Bach is so overwhelming that his compositions in some genres can risk eclipsing his work in others; his glorious choral works, profound organ compositions, and exquisite solo compositions for violin and cello have historically attracted the most attention. Volume 7 of Bach Perspectives aims to restore Bach’s concertos to their rightful place of honor.

The volume opens with Gregory Butler focusing on Bach’s Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings in E Major BWV 1053 as a pastiche created by a process of assemblage of three earlier, heterogeneous movements. Pieter Dirksen, on the basis of his study of the source history of the Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings in F Minor BWV 1056, concludes that it represents a transcription of an earlier violin concerto in G Minor. David Schulenberg investigates the generic ambiguity of the concerto at the beginning of the eighteenth century and how it gradually diverges from the sonata as a distinct genre. Completing the volume is Christoph Wolff’s general examination of the Siciliano as a slow movement in Bach’s concertos and its implications for the source history of his Concerto for Harpsichord and Strings in E Major BWV 1053.

GREGORY BUTLER is a professor of musicology at the University of British Columbia. He is the author of Bach’s Clavier-Übung III: The Making of a Print.
